It's that time of year again to honor dads and all that they do. On Sunday, June 21, why not take dad out on the town for a delicious meal? Restaurant options abound from family-friendly Mexican buffets to classy fine-dining establishments. Check out one of these Bay Area eateries for a fabulous Father's Day meal sure to show dad how much he is appreciated.

Located beneath Nob Hill's Scarlet Huntington Hotel, the Big 4 Restaurant is named in homage to four 19th century railway tycoons – one of which was Leland Stanford – credited with much of San Francisco's early development. Big 4 is the perfect spot to bring the history buff dad. Harkening back to another era, the restaurant is decorated with a variety of memorabilia including pre-1906 earthquake photos of the city. With live music nightly, dad will love Chef Kevin Scott's approachable yet sophisticated locally-sourced menu. Make sure to order dad a Golden Spike cocktail, named after the final railroad spike connecting the country's first transcontinental railway.
