Cold, damp weather and yes, even a frizzle of rain, is the perfect excuse to spend an afternoon inside, playing games and enjoying the radiant warmth of a fire. In San Francisco, there is no shortage of restaurants, bars and hotels with fireplaces, but these five offer a great atmosphere and a hefty dose of old-school and new-school classic San Francisco.

Swathed in green leather tacked to high polish wood, the classic, Edwardian-era club chairs in front of the tall fireplace at Big 4, the restaurant inside Nob Hill's Scarlet Huntington hotel, are appealingly classic. Once seated, you feel so cozy, it is almost impossible to leave. Never mind. Here, the Doric columned fireplace boasts a scene on its mantel of frolicking cherubs, a visual antidote to the season's garish glitz. Grab a burger or grilled cheese and tomato soup from the bar menu or while away an hour with a barrel-aged cocktail before the demands of the season propel you back outside.
